The no-swipe dating app

Built for young professionals in Brisbane who are done swiping.

+1

THE PROBLEM

Modern dating apps optimise for volume, not connection

Busy professionals face fake profiles, mismatched intent, and safety risks — while the core swipe mechanic rewards quick judgments over real compatibility.

3–7 sec

Average time Tinder users take to swipe on a profile

72.3%

Of Australian dating app users have experienced online harassment or aggression

$12k

Average loss for Australian victims of online dating scams

43% vs 25%

Share of men catfished more than once, vs women

MARKET LANDSCAPE

A crowded market, still worth $5.3B a year

$5.34B in global dating app revenue (2022) across a fragmented field of players, each solving a different slice of the problem.

Tinder

Volume-first swiping, the category leader

Bumble

Women message first

Hinge

Built for long-term relationships

The League

Invite-only, exclusivity-driven

Badoo

Social discovery turned dating

Happn

Matches by real-world proximity

WHAT WE'RE LEARNING FROM

The League proved exclusivity works — and where it breaks

1

Referral system

Each member gets one ticket to bring in a friend — built-in, trusted growth.

2

Elitism backlash

A hard vetting bar reads as exclusionary and has drawn criticism for it.

3

Steep pricing

Top-tier members reportedly pay close to $1,000 a week for full features.

THE SOLUTION

Plus 1: slower by design

Three ideas replace the swipe: one match a day, a hard cap on conversations, and identity you actually earn.

1

No swiping

One curated match a day. No feed, no scrolling, no burnout.

2

Verified and balanced

Phone verification, a referral or meetup gate, and a strict 50/50 gender ratio.

3

Meaningful pace

Only 3 conversations at once. Profiles reveal themselves as trust builds.

HOW IT WORKS

The daily rhythm

01

One match a day

You're shown exactly one person, chosen for you.

02

Keep or let go

Decide the same day. Passing means your next match arrives tomorrow.

03

Up to 3 conversations

Keep builds toward a running set of three active chats.

04

Make room for a fourth

Want a new one at the cap? Let an existing conversation go first.

HOW IT WORKS

Trust unlocks the profile

You start with one small photo. The rest of who they are reveals itself as the conversation goes.

1 photo

What you start with — small, like a first impression.

+1 photo every 3 exchanges

Up to 6 photos total as the conversation continues.

Date idea at 10 exchanges

The app itself suggests a first date once things are flowing.

Verified by design, not by badge

1

Phone verification

Every account starts with an SMS/WhatsApp one-time passcode.

2

Referral or meetup gate

Join via a verified member's referral, or through an in-person meetup.

3

Balanced by ratio

A strict 50/50 gender split, enforced with a waitlist.

4

In-app reporting

Built-in reporting and moderation from day one.

GETTING VERIFIED

The waitlist clears through real life

1

Sign up and wait

New users land on a waitlist until they're verified.

2

Book a meetup

A Saturday run, coffee morning, or trivia night, hosted by an organiser.

3

Meet your first 3 matches

Meetup attendees become your first conversations — already verified.

4

You're in

From here, the daily match and 3-conversation system takes over.

Built with an expiry date, not a subscription

Conversation goes dry

After 7 days without a reply.

Profile goes dry

After 21 days without opening the app.

Cost, compared
